SEVEN PERSONS PERISH

Terrible Tragedy Attending the Burning of a Factory in Washington.

FOUR JUMP FROM THE ROOF

They Were at Work in the Fifth Flat and Were Driven to the Roof by the Flames.—The Bodies Recovered—One of the Victims Was a Woman.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 18.—A fire alarm yesterday called the fire department to the corner of Massachusetts Avenue and C Street, where a fire had been discovered in the mattress factory owned and operated by Stumph & Bros. This was soon followed by a general alarm, and in a short time the fire was under control.

One of them, James E. Vaughn, an American, was killed by a falling beam. The other three who leaped escaped, but one of them, a woman, was killed by a falling beam.

It was not long before the searchers found three bodies close together about 15 feet from the ground. The bodies were those of the three who had jumped from the roof.

The work of searching the debris for the bodies of the four who had jumped from the roof was begun. So far as could be learned the missing ones were Henry Fowler, Philomena, Willie Ache, a little boy, and another, an engineer, name unknown, and the bodies were recovered.

SIR HUBBERT'S MISTAKE

The Offer to Canadian Sealers Was Not Made With Authority.

SECRETARY GRESHAM EXPLAINS

He Thought a Certain Sum Might be Paid the Sealers in Lieu of Their Claims. But the Foreign Committee Refused to Take Action in the Matter.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19.—The positive statement attributed in an Ottawa interview to Sir Charles H. Tupper, Canadian Minister of Fisheries, that an offer of $400,000 had been made by Secretary Gresham in lieu of the claims of Canadian sealers for damages for sealers in Behring Sea under the modus vivendi, if correct, indicates once more the inactivity of year the best informed officials of the British provinces to appreciate the difference between the modus vivendi of the United States and Great Britain and its colonies.

As near as can be gathered from the cautious statements of the State Department officials Mr. Gresham did convey to Sir Charles H. Tupper, during his visit to Washington, that before the adjournment of Congress, an intimation that the payment of a certain amount by the United States, which might have been $400,000, might perhaps be regarded as a satisfactory settlement of the dispute.

Such an admission on the part of a British minister was of course regarded as an admission on the part of the government as binding on the government and would be carried out, but in Mr. Gresham's case it could only be regarded as an offer of compromise of Congress and as such it was not carried out.

Mr. Gresham's explanation was that he had interviewed with prominent members of the sealers' union in Behring Sea, and that the result was a flat refusal to accept Congress to take any action in the matter, and that he was therefore unable to do so.
